Video Production,
Editing and Choreography

Carissa Green is a 20-year veteran of the entertainment industry in Los Angeles. She began her illustrious career at age 2 ½ .Then, at the encouragement of her teacher, she continued to dance right through college, attending the University of Texas at Austin and graduating with a Bachelor of Arts in Dance.

She subsequently moved to Los Angeles and began her professional dance career in earnest. Carissa spent the first several years as a dancer, working on television shows such as “Roseanne” and for commercials and industrials, even representing M.C. Hammer at a stage show launch of a Hammer-related product (go, white girl), then quickly moved into choreography. Carissa has choreographed “The Shadow” for Universal starring Alec Baldwin, several episodes of a children’s show for Fox, industrials for Taco Bell and Hasbro, an independent feature, made-for-TV movies for Showtime Networks and Starz!/Encore, commercials for companies such as Miller Genuine Draft, and has been fortunate enough to be asked to choreograph for “Jimmy Kimmel Live” many times over the past couple of years.

Her “latest and greatest” was to choreograph a national ad campaign for Zappos.com earlier this year. (It’s the one with the boxes if you’re lookin’.) In her free time, she dabbles in reality and likes to produce, edit and direct promos for networks such as Fox, ABC, NBC, CBS (and anyone else who will have her).
